The students at Easterseals Academy Chicago Campus were dressed to impress on Career Day on April 12.

Post-secondary and secondary students participated in mock interviews for their choice of stocking, food service, or clerical positions. Students practiced dressing appropriately for an interview, asking and answering questions about the positions, and advocating for any supports they would need at work. Each student brought a personal portfolio to the interview. Jeremy West, our case manager, took headshots for each student.

Easterseals Academy is a non-public, therapeutic day school for students with autism spectrum disorder, emotional disability, developmental delay, or intellectual disability. It has three campuses in Chicago, Tinley Park, and Machesney Park.
